JAMES OPPOSES CARDINALS

By NICK FLATLEY.

With "Tireless Bill" James listed to shoot them over the saucer today, the cans of the Braves against the Cardinals in the final game of the series looks very promising. The curveless wonder, at this particular stage of the game, is just about unbeatable.

He has seven straight to his credit already and, with a chance to eclipse Dick Rudolph's record of eleven in a row, is likely to pitch his head off. He has beaten the Cardinals with more or less regularity before, so why not again?

The St. Louis Debating Society—otherwise known as the Cards—is just about out of it now. Seven and a half games behind the Climbers, the St. Louis chances of getting near enough to the top again to even hope for ultimate success are very slim.

When the Brave artillery loosened up yesterday and piled up a good lead, the fire that has characterized the warriors of the west sort of snuffed out.

CARDS BOW TO CLASS.

Their jabbering and their crabbing ceased down. The Braves simply had more class and before the battle had ended managed to amuse the big crowd that looked on by the almost cruel manner in which they joshed along the enemy.

These same Braves now have struck that stage in their career when a win grows stereotyped and a loss is something entirely out of the ordinary. The same spirit carried the Athletics along during their wonderful winning streak in the American circuit.

The same spirit, if it keeps up—and there's no reason to believe it

IRELAND HAS WISH OF YEARS

By LAWRENCE ELSTON, American Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—King George has signed the home rule for Ireland bill. But while it is now a law, the measure will not go into effect for a year as the King has also given royal assent to the bill suspending the operation of the home rule bill until the end of the war.

Formal announcement that King George had given royal assent to these two important measures was made in the House of Lords today. In the meantime the government will develop a plan to settle the Ulster exclusion question, which arose from the hostility of the Ulster Unionists against home rule.

The suspending bill was passed in the House of Commons on Wednesday. The importance of the legislation was overshadowed by the great war, but the news that the King had signed the home rule bill caused great rejoicing among the Irish Nationalists.

Leaders of the home rule fight declared that they felt no chagrin over the delay in the bill becoming operative as the extraordinary conditions prevailing now make it necessary.

VICTORY AT LAST FOR IRELAND AFTER 114 YEARS' FIGHT

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

After a fight of 114 years' duration, Ireland has home rule.

The bill brought into Parliament two years ago by Prime Minister Asquith with the object of restoring to Ireland her national legislature is now part and parcel of the statute law of Great Britain.

The fight begun thirty years ago by Charles Stewart Parnell and Michael Davitt has ended in victory.

The home rule policy of William Ewart Gladstone, of Henry Campbell-Bannerman of John Morley, of James Bryce, defeated as it was by the Tories for a quarter of a century, ends today in triumph.

Every word and act of those friendly, liberal English statesmen stands vindicated by the doings of this day at Westminster.

SIR JAMES PRESENTS "PROOFS"

Documents introduced to prove there was such a person as Sir James Carlton, Baronet, and testimony to establish the legality of the marriage to the woman he says is his lawful wife, were introduced at the hearing today before United States Immigration Commissioner Daniel J. Leonard on whether "Sir" James and "Lady" Carlton have a right to remain in this country.

Half a dozen witnesses testified to the excellent character of the defendant. Neither himself nor "Lady" Carlton took the stand, though both were present throughout the hearing and presented documents to support Carlton's contention. The Carltons were represented by former Assistant United States Attorney-General William H. Lewis.

Bruce Wyman, formerly a professor of law at Harvard, who qualified as an expert on the conflict of laws, including marriages under different jurisdiction, was one of the most important witnesses for the defence. He testified that the Scottish common law marriages under which Carlton claims to have been wedded to "Lady" Carlton is legal and recognize das such the world over. He testified:

Donnelly was followed on the stand by several officers of the United States Oxygen Company—the company which Carlton is promoting in Boston—who testified to his good character and his straightforward and honest method of doing business.

Scott H. Tolman, president of the Tolman Manufacturing Company in South Boston and head of the United States Oxygen Company, said:

"The United States Oxygen Company which Sir Carlton is promoting and of which I a mpresident is a bona fide company, engaged in an honest enterprise and organized and conducted in accordance with the laws of its incorporation and those of the city, State and country. Sir Carlton has always been square and honorable in all of his dealings. He is a man above reproach."

Testimony of a similar nature was given by Mr. Rollins of the Robert Douglas Company, public accounts, who started the books of the United States Oxygen Company and who is also the auditor of the company; H. E. Long of the Auto Transfer Company and Edward A. Byrne, secretary and treasurer of the company, who was formerly manager of vaults at the Exchange Trust Company.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY IN CLIFTON

Bert Lawton, a Salem salesman, shot and almost instantly killed his wife as she slighted from an automobile near the railroad station at Clifton, near Marblehead, today, and then turned his revolver on himself, putting a bullet through his heart, killing him instantly.

Lawton had been standing on the curbing in front of the station for some time. He was known in Clifton, and attracted attention by his vigil. Shortly after noon an automobile drew up in front of the depot. In it was Mrs. Lawton, another woman believed to be her sister, and a man, believed to be her sister's husband.

Mrs. Lawton opened the door of the car. As she stepped down, Lawton stepped up to her, pulling a revolver out from under his coat. Before anyone could get near enough to interfere, he had fired four times at range close enough to powder-burn.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Charles S. He was sentenced to not less than twenty years' imprisonment.

Patti's Servants Held as Hostages

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Mme. Adelina Patti and her husband, Baron Cederstrom, have arrived here from Carlsbad. Both were arrested when war was declared and kept prisoners in their hotel. Their rooms were ransacked by the authorities, but they were released after three weeks on condition that their servants remain as hostages. They travelled to the Swiss frontier in a cattle train.

100,000 Prisoners in Berlin Camps

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—That Germany has under guard in one of her military camps, near Berlin, more than 100,000 Russian, British, French and Belgian prisoners, was asserted by a Chicagoan, August Pfaff, who returned from Europe on the liner Cretic, which brought 276 first class passengers from the war zone.

Mrs. Jedwiga Kerslauskane, twenty-eight, employed in the Watertown Union Carpet Company's factory, told Judge Lues in the Waltham District Court today that $18 worth of silk found wrapped about her leg was bound around an injury and that she did not intend to steal it. She was held until Tuesday in $500 bail.

Schumann-Heink Scores as Detective

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 18.—Detective Henry Schumann-Heink, son of the prima donna, aided in the capture of two men in the jewelry store of L. A. Fiagetti. Two girls, believed to be accomplices, escaped. Diamonds valued at $5,000 were found on the prisoners.

KAISER'S PEACE IDEA FLATLY REJECTED BY BRITISH SOVEREIGN

While the United States seeks to introduce peace among the warring European nations, and while Germany is making tentative inquiries as to the allies' probable demands, King George of England declares, as if in answer to Germany, that England is fighting for a worthy purpose and will not lay down arms until this purpose is achieved.

The King's statement was made today in his speech proroguing Parliament. Coming, as it does, right after semi-official inquiry from Berlin as to peace propositions, the reply of King George may be regarded as a renewal of the British sentiment recently voiced by the London Times, that the "German sword must be broken."

The English King's reply to Germany is related in the following dispatch:

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—"We are fighting for a worthy purpose and we will not lay down our arms until this purpose is achieved."

These ringing words were sounded by King George in the House of Commons today in his speech proroguing Parliament.

The speech of the King was devoted solely to the war and to the part which England is playing in the titanic struggle against Germany and Austria.

Every endeavor was exerted by the British government to maintain the peace of Europe, declared King George, and, in the words of the King, "Great Britain went to war for the protection of public law in England and because treaties had been set at naught."

The royal speech was greeted with thunderous cheers

KING GEORGE SIGNS HOME RULE MEASURE

John Boyle O'Reilly, by George Frisbie Hoar, is today a winning cause.

By March, 1916, the freely elected representatives of the Irish people will meet once more in their Parliament house on College Green in Dublin, the capital of Ireland.

And thereafter, for all time, the people of Ireland, through those representatives, will make the laws to regulate the internal affairs of their own land, under the authority of an Irish executive, chosen by the provision of the bill made law today.

Postponement of the operation of the law for a year or a few months more, is not only tolerated, but it is eagerly sought, by the Irish leaders, the men who know the situation and who are on the ground.

The postponement is necessary and wise for many reasons.

Chief among them is the necessity of regaining control and reconstructing the historic Parliament building, whose walls are sacred to the eloquent traditions of a Grattan, a Flood, a Curran, a Shiel, a Seymour Bushe, a Farrell, a Boyle and scores of others, whose names shine in Irish history.

But postponement is made even more necessary by the fact that the Irish leaders, the men who are to govern Ireland hereafter, will need every hour of a year to so carefully and scrutinizingly over the vast payrolls of the office holders in Dublin Castle and throughout the country, so that the honest, the loyal and the patriotic may be weeded from among the army of today parasites, who for a century and more have been robbing Ireland by their outrageously extravagant salaries and bleeding the nation at every pore.

The Irish Nationalist leaders will not be rushed in the task that lies before them.

The great thought for today is—Ireland, at last, has justice.

A new era of peace and concord has begun for the peoples of Ireland and Great Britain.

ETAIN is twelve miles to the northeast of Verdun.

THIAUCOURT is twenty-eight miles southeast of Verdun.

FORESTS OF PORGES, north of Verdun, marks the place where the Germans in retreat reached the Meuse River.

GRODEK, occupied by the Russians, is eighteen miles west of Lemberg, on the heights under which a chain of six lakes stretch out toward the Russian frontier, forming a natural defence for fourteen miles running north and south.

Message to Powers Next Step

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Through the Imperial Chancellor, Von Bethmann-Hollweg, to Ambassador Gerard at Berlin, following an inquiry sent by the American Government, Germany has suggested informally that the United States should undertake to secure from Great Britain, France and Russia a statement of terms by which the allies would accept peace.

According to high diplomatic authority, the Kaiser's attitude is as follows:

First—Germany would be glad to listen to mediation suggestions, but is absolutely prohibited by the attitude of England.

Second—Germany will not stop fighting so long as England declares this must be a war to the finish.

Third—Germany can take up the question of mediation and peace only when the allies are willing to assume a like attitude of conciliation and consideration.

RESIST DISMEMBERMENT.

Fourth—If this is to be a war to the finish, as England declares daily, then Germany will fight on. If the allies are determined to crush and dismember her, then she will fight to the last man.

Fifth—If the world at large hopes for disarmament, then the crushing of Germany is the poorest way to accomplish it. Crushed, Germany will repeat the era after the Napoleonic wars and arm every man and child in the Empire for the day of revenge.

Sixth—Germany is willing to call the war a draw. Such a solution, she maintains, would be most conducive to future peace in Europe and to disarmament. Complete victory on either side would not lead to stable conditions.

There are three prerequisites to Germany's consideration of peace negotiations:

First—There must be something more substantial than the offer than the mere tender of good offices of the United States. While recognizing the kindly interests of this government, yet it contains no assurance from the allies. England must forego her demands for war to a finish and the complete crushing of Germany. As long as that attitude is persisted in Germany will be compelled to turn a deaf ear to all friendly offers.

WAR OF SELF DEFENCE.

Second—Germany in Europe must not be dismembered. While negotiations might be considered concerning colonies, the German empire must remain intact.

Third—Germany must be let alone by other powers around her in the future. Every man in the Empire believes sincerely and honestly today that the war is one of self defence against the hostile encroachments of Russia, France and England. Live and let live is the policy that Germany wishes its enemies to observe.

The offer of American mediation is declined by Germany because there is no assurance from the start that it would be considered by them.

President Wilson took no action as a result of the message, waiting to hear from Ambassador Gerard whether anything of a more formal character could be obtained by him which the United States might communicate to Great Britain, France and Russia. It was understood today that neither the British nor French Ambassador, who are in Washington, was informed officially or unofficially by Secretary Bryan of the exchange between the Imperial German Chancellor and Ambassador Gerard.

The general belief in well-informed circles today was that the President, after waiting a few days for more information from Berlin, probably would instruct the American Ambassadors at London, Paris and Petrograd to communicate what the Imperial German Chancellor had said to Ambassador Gerard.

It was believed that the Ambassadors would be asked to reiterate the wish of the American government to be of service in bringing about peace and to point out the readiness of the United States to communicate to Germany and Austria any statement of terms which the allies might care to make.

NEWTON GIRLS GIVE 'PAGEANT OF CHARLES'

"The Pageant of the Charles," with over 200 girls of Newton, Wellesley and Waltham taking part, will be given Saturday on the banks of the Charles at Newton Lower Falls. A number of subjects, symbolic of the earliest history of the river and the cities and towns in its vicinity, will be featured with members of the Community Club and the Elinor Gregg Club taking part.

Among those prominent in the tableau are Catherine Clooney, Ethel M. Cooper, Alice Caine, Helen Warren and Nellie O'Neil.

One episode, "Men of the Past," will show, among other things, the first landing of Lief Ericsson and his band of Norsemen on the shores of America.

An elaborate figure entitled "The Dance of the Smoke," will be given by the entire membership of the club, the leading parts will be danced by Mrs. R. B. Pendergast and Lila Rentz of Brookline. Fifty little boys will represent cinders.

Another episode has for its theme "Jean Lavina," the old Lower Falls gardener, whom Harriet Beecher Stowe immortalized as the Children's storyteller" in her book, "Old Town Folks." There will be a "Sun Dance" by Miss Lara West of the Lower Falls; Mrs. Anna Eastman Frost, the director, will dance "The Spirit of the River," and as a finale the whole cast will form a long, winding line, representing the turnings which the Charles makes in its journeyings through the Newtons.

Has Made No Endorsement.

Representative James T. Kenney of Ward 21, who is a candidate for re-election to the House, says that he has endorsed neither James A. Watson nor any other candidate in the Eleventh District congressional fight.

WIFE DEAD BY GAS; HUSBAND MAY DIE TOO

WEBSTER, Sept. 18.—Mrs. Joseph La Chance was asphyxiated and her husband is not expected to live as a result of inhaling illuminating gas in their home in Cross street, early today. The gas escaped from an open jet in a stove in the kitchen. Mr. and Mrs. La Chance slept in the room leading off the kitchen.

Ten children of the couple were asleep upstairs. Ralph, eighteen, the oldest, heard his father choking. He ran downstairs and dragged him out on the veranda. Dr. Joseph O. Genereu later revived La Chance, but his condition is critical.

Mrs. La Chance got up early and went upstairs to see that the children were covered up. It is believed that in passing the gas stove in the kitchen her night gown caught one of the valve levers and accidentally opened it. Mrs. La Chance was forty-one years old and was born in St. Pierre, Canada. Her husband is forty-five and is employed as a road construction foreman.

CRESSY DRAWS HIS CHARACTERS FROM REAL LIFE

Will Cressy and Blanche Dayne, the latter wife of the "best character actor in vaudeville," Cressy celebrates his 25th anniversary as an actor tomorrow.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"I'm the meanest man in the State of New Hampshire, and I wish I was meaner. I wish I came from Vermont."

Of all the cross-grained old curmudgeons that ever walked on a stage there is no doubt that Will M. Cressy is the superintive, and yet he says he can't act. Off the stage he is a jovial and genial character. On the boards at Keith's the audience is amazed at his stinginess and narrowness. If that isn't acting, what is it?

Imagine an actor looking you in the eye and saying: "You know I can't act. Why, cast me as a Chinaman, Jew, Irishman or negro and I'd play them all the same. All I can do is Cressy."

That's Will M. Cressy, and all he does is win the reputation of being the best character actor in vaudeville. Modesty is a rare virtue and the glare of the footlights usually scares it away, but you can't say that about Cressy.

Will Cressy and Blanche Dayne are Mr. and Mrs. Cressy off the stage, and according to the frank and open Mr. Cressy they are a couple of typpiest. They love travel. When the theatrical season is over they keep on traveling, and if they ever stayed more than a couple of weeks in one place they would suffocate. They have encircled the world at numerous times and they have traveled so far in their automobile that the speedometer reads like the distance between the earth and the moon.

"Where did you get your New Hampshire dialect, Mr. Cressy?" I demanded. "It is perfect."

"Where did I get it. I was born with it. I was born in Bradford, N. H., and I lay all my sketches in the town. All the characters I draw from my memory of the folks around me when I grew up. This old skate who runs the grocery store I remember when I was a boy in Bradford. They used to say he had been disappointed in love.

"You know I celebrate my twenty-fifth anniversary as an actor Saturday. My first job was down in Meriden, Conn., and during the first six weeks I earned $24. So now I take it easy and look for parts where I don't have to work hard. You watch me and you'll see that I nearly always sit down and let my wife do the acting. She is some actress."

"I have been offered positions as traveling saleswoman on the line of talk I give as the drummer in the playlet," said Mrs. Cressy, smilingly.

"Yes," said Cressy, cheerfully. "Mrs. Cressy can go on the road any time she wants to, but why should she? She's on it already."

John Townsend Trowbridge, poet, author and journalist, is today celebrating his 87th anniversary at his home in Arlington. With his two small grandchildren he started out early today for a long walk.

It May Be Handy to Know This; They Are Spats of Lace

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—She stood, a bewitching picture, in front of the Waldorf, but there was one note out of tune in the general symphony of her apparel. Between her skirt hem and slim patent leather heels there fluttered two filmy lace somethings.

Men stared, women blushed, but no one wanted to tell her. Finally, one sympathetic matron whispered in her ear. The young lady smiled, lifted her skirt and the audience gasped.

She was wearing spats made of Irish lace!

DIRECTORS OF PORT URGE NEED OF BIG CHANNEL

The Directors of the Port of Boston have written the Massachusetts Congressmen requesting them to bring to the attention of Congress as emphatically as possible the necessity of favorable action on the project for a forty-foot channel for Boston Harbor. They say, in part:

"On account of the Inter-State Commerce Commission allowing a 'differential freight rate' to more Southern ports than Boston and New York, these two cities must secure the big express, combination freight and passenger boats, using the passenger business as the inducement to offset the 'differential' and thereby compensate the steamship lines for their loss on freight.

"These boats carrying from several hundred to several thousand passengers should not be forced to wait for the tide in order to enter or leave port. At New York, they are not so prevented, for there they have a forty-foot channel. At Boston they are prevented for here they have not.

"The Directors will be in Washington on Thursday next and would like to arrange a conference with the Massachusetts delegation to take action in the matter."

FRANTIC NOW, KELIHER BEGS FOR SALOON AID

Indignation was expressed from one end of the Tenth Congressional District to the other today at the attempt of the John A. Keliher forces to "line the saloons up" against Peter F. Tague.

John A. Keliher, grown desperate as signs multiply that Tague will defeat him as Murray defeated him, has called upon the saloon element to save him.

An address made by Mr. Tague in March, before a branch of the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society, is the basis of a Keliher circular falsely charging Tague with being a supporter of the Anti-Saloon League. Mr. Tague advised the total abstainers to be true to the principles of their world-wide organization. There wasn't an anti-saloon word in the Tague discourse.

Blanket-size circulars have, nevertheless, been sent to every saloon keeper and every bartender in the Tenth Congressional District quoting a speech alleged to have been made by Mr. Tague in Lynn, Sunday, March 1, before the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society.

CIRCULARS ISSUED.

Before this representative organization, Representative Tague, at that time the Democratic leader of the House of Representatives, is alleged to have said:

"Seventy-five per cent, of the inmates of almshouses, penitentiaries and insane asylums of this Commonwealth are there because of the drink evil, developed in themselves or in their ancestors."

The Keliher circulars purport to have been signed by John J. McCarthy, of No. 151 Bennington street. It was said today at the rooms of the Democratic State Committee that the only voter registered from that address is Vernon McCrae.

The circulars are headed like this: ATTENTION, LIQUOR DEALERS!

Another malicious attack upon a legitimate BUSINESS.

Every Man in the Trade Should Read and Resent These Wicked Misstatements and Repudiate Their Author.

The concluding paragraphs of the screed are:

JOHN A. KELIHER HAS BEEN IN CONGRESS AND HIS RECORD ON MATTERS AFFECTING THE LIQUOR TRADE IS WELL KNOWN. HE HAS BEEN A COURAGEOUS, SANE FIGHTER FOR THE PROPER REGULATION OF THE LIQUOR BUSINESS, AND HE DESERVES THE SUPPORT OF EVERY PERSON CONNECTED WITH THE LIQUOR TRADE WHO IS NOT ASHAMED OF THAT BUSINESS.

Men of the trade, you should work and VOTE FOR KELIHER, and let Peter F. Tague's ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE friends come to Tague's support.

TAGUE SECRETARY TALKS.

Representative men in the liquor trade declared today that the anti-Tague circular is to them conclusive proof that the "Keliher campaign has blown up." "There is nothing wrong in Tague's record at the State House—four years in the House and two years in the Senate—to inspire any hostility to the licensed trade or any tendency to trail with the Anti-Saloon League.

"Up to the beginning of the present week," Secretary Joseph Kane of the Tague Campaign Committee declares, "Keliher and his friends had been claiming victory. Now we know that they were whistling to keep up their courage. They haven't got a look in.

"When a man who has had eight years in Congress is forced to make his appeal to the liquor trade, and have it signed with the name of a Mysterious Unknown whom no man can find, it is plain enough that he has rallied upon the lean years and is all in."

Mr. Tague, cheered by the report that throughout the district the organization is for him and against Keliher, the bolter, today declined to discuss the Total Abstinence circular.

"Mr. Keliher's methods," Mr. Tague declared, "are of other days. One example is this eleventh-hour attack based upon an address before a temperance society. Another is Mr. Keliher's declaration yesterday, at the Cunard docks in East Boston, that 'off upon a time I said that $1.25 a day is enough for any workingman.'

CRITICISES TACTICS.

"John A. Keliher is forty-eight years old and John A. Keliher knows that ever since he attended his first rally, back in the '70s, there hasn't been a campaign in which some candidate was not accused of having said that $1, or $1.50, is enough for the laboring man.

"The Keliher style of political fighting is as old as Mr. Keliher's friend, Joe Cannon. Mr. Keliher has made but one departure from the usually accepted versions. He fixes the price at $1.25.

"I leave it to the intelligent workingmen of East Boston, Charlestown and the North, West and South Ends to administer the proper rebuke to a statesman who descends to such tactics and such methods. I never spoke or voted against the licensed liquor business in my life. My votes, on the contrary, have all been the other way. This, in spite of the fact that I am personally a total abstainer and a firm believer in such temperance organizations as the Father Mathew Society. If this be 'anti-saloon,' Mr. Keliher is free to make the most of it.

"I have been a toiler all my life. There was no golden spoon in the Tague household when I was a child and there is none today. Mr. Keliher cannot malign me with hoary old political chestnuts for—unlike John Keliher—I am a native of this political district and still make this district my home. Win or lose, I shall continue to live here.

"And I am going to win. The man who voted to retain the 'Joe' Cannon rules of 1909, and whose vote was denounced by Champ Clark as the vote of a traitor to the Democratic party, the man who contested with William F. Murray in the Democratic primaries of 1910 and, beaten by Mr. Murray, bolted the primaries and ran independent, or anti-Democratic, cannot be nominated by the Democracy of the Tenth District this year."

Keliher, it was said today, has been concentrating his efforts on East Boston. The Tague vote will be big in Charlestown and the North, South and West Ends. Tague will give Keliher a battle on Noddle Island and, Democratic leaders declared today, win the district by 2,500 votes.

Americans Alive to Trade Chances, Says London Times

While the British manufacturers are making preparations to capture the world's trade of her enemies, it should not be forgotten that the Americans are equally alive to the possibilities and in some respects are in a more favorable position. The American is quick to seize a new idea and bold in planning enterprises that he believes will be profitable.—London Times warning to English manufacturers.

TEMPERANCE CAMPAIGN FOR ALL NEXT WEEK

From every section of this country speakers are now on their way to Massachusetts to take part in the big temperance demonstration which is to be launched, commencing next Monday, by the Anti-Saloon League of America, acting with the Massachusetts League.

F. S. Spence of Toronto, Canada, will be the representative of the Dominion in the big crusade. He is the head of the Canadian Anti-Saloon League.

Seventeen rallies are planned to take place in Boston Sunday, September 27. At these rallies all of the big speakers will be present. There has never been a greater aggregation of temperance orators in this State in its history.

By Sunday the entire State will have been covered by the speakers. All the week long they will work inward from the outlying sections for the final demonstration in Boston. This demonstration will rightly continue two days, as one of its most spectacular features will be the mass meeting to be held on Boston Common, Saturday, September 26, at o'clock in the afternoon.

One hundred thousand people are expected to attend the big Common meeting.

At the meeting to be held in Hingham next Tuesday night, the Hon. John D. Long will officiate and introduce the visiting orators.

YOUNG ELOPERS GET NO LICENSE, RETURN HOME

WORCESTER, Sept. 18. — After failing to obtain a marriage license in Canaan, Ct., and in Pittsfield, Frank T. Hayden, eighteen, of No. 59 Benefit street, returned to his home Wednesday with Ruth Mougin, fifteen, daughter of Edward Mougin, of Lee, with whom he eloped.

While young Hayden was endeavoring to persuade his father to give permission for the marriage, the girl's father and two policemen called at the house with a warrant for the boy's arrest on a charge of abduction.

Finally the fathers got together in the office of the chief of police, and after a conference Mr. Mougin decided to drop the warrant and return to Lee with his daughter.

She still insists that she wants to marry Hayden, who has been working in a Lee hotel as a bell boy for the Summer.

CONFESSES TO ATTACK ON NURSE

Arrested yesterday in Westchester, Pa., and brought back to Newton today to face the charge of attacking Miss Margaret Sullivan, a nurse at Dr. Cousens' Hospital in Waltham, Harry Kimball confessed the crime to the Newton police today.

Kimball is a colored youth of twenty. The attack upon Miss Sullivan occurred on the evening of May 27. She was then attending a patient at a home on Cherry street, West Newton. A circus was located about 400 yards away.

Miss Sullivan went out for her usual walk in the evening. She heard a man's steps behind her, but did not turn round. The man struck her with some weapon, knocked her unconscious, attacked her and departed with her handbag containing $68.

The girl, desperately injured, recovered consciousness and dragged herself to the home of Mayor Hatfield of Newton. Mrs. Hatfield telephoned for an ambulance and she was taken to Dr. Cousens' Hospital.

The police made investigations, traced up the circus which was playing in West Newton at the time, followed Kimball's trail to Westchester and there yesterday Inspector Edward O'Halloran and Special Officer Richard Good arrested him. He had been indicted by the Grand Jury and waived extradition.

The Newton police say he confessed readily enough when questioned today.

Bury Policeman Who Served City 39 Years

The funeral of John Walsh, former police officer, who was retired two months ago after serving the city for thirty-nine years, took place today from No. 758 East Fourth street, South Boston. Services were held at the Gate of Heaven Church. There were fifty priests in the sanctuary from various parts of the city. Burial was at Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

Mrs. Charles H. Wilson, formerly Jane Delehanty of East Boston.

Charles H. Wilson, the Alfred G. Vanderbilt whip, who figured in the romantic life of Florence Schenck and later married Miss Josephine Delehanty of East Boston, narrowly escaped death at the Westchester horse show at White Plains, N. Y., when a man giving the name of Frederick Schultz fired five shots at him, one wounding Wilson in the left foot. The reason for the shooting is a mystery. Wilson declared he had never seen Schultz.

According to Walter Kelly, who knocked the revolver from the hands of Schultz, the latter walked up to Wilson and cried:

"You wrecked that girl's life. You hired me to kill her, but you didn't come across. Now I am going to kill you."

Later, it is reported, Schultz said Florence Schenck was the girl he referred to.

Five pistol shots split the air in swift succession, when Schultz opened fire on Wilson, who had just driven off the course.

At the first shot Wilson leaped behind the Vanderbilt horses, shielding his head and body, and leaving only his legs exposed.

Wilson was taken to the White Plains Hospital by direction of Reginald Vanderbilt. His wound proved to be slight, and after it was treated he was able to leave the hospital.

WALSH GAINS; IN NO DANGER OF LOCKJAW

OFFICIAL BULLETIN.

The Governor's physical condition is very satisfactory to his doctor and family. He is fast regaining his strength, and the wound caused by the fracture is healing rapidly and in healthy condition.

The progress the past few days has been so favorable that it is now expected that the Governor will be able to leave the hospital the early part of next week.

THOS. H. CONNELLY,
Secretary to the Governor.

Governor Walsh is "perfectly well and improving as rapidly as can be expected," according to a formal statement made today by Dr. Charles L. Scudder of No. 209 Beacon street in reply to the report that there was fear of the Governor's developing tetanus, or lockjaw.

"There is no cause for alarm," Dr. Scudder added. "Please dispel all such rumors."

Dr. Harry W. Goodall explained the treatment being given the Governor, which gave rise to the rumors. He said:

"The condition of Governor Walsh is perfectly satisfactory. No fear is felt for his recovery. No morbid symptoms have developed to occasion any alarm.

CHRISTMAS TOY PLANT BURNED IN FITCHBURG

FITCHBURG, Sept. 18.—A big stock of Christmas toys was destroyed today by a fire which wiped out the plant of the Toy Crafters, Incorporated, a group of buildings on Winter and Lunenberg streets. The factory has been busy night and day filling orders to overcome the stoppage of the German supply, owing to the war. More help was to have been hired Monday.

The fire started in the paint shop, probably from combustion. Low water pressure handicapped the firemen. The loss was $25,000. Sparks set fire to a score of dwellings, among them that of Judge Walter Perley Hall of the Superior Court. All the house fires were extinguished by bucket brigades before any great damage had been done. The 100 employes escaped without trouble.

AGED SISTER OF CONGRESSMAN THAYER KILLED

WORCESTER, Sept. 18.—Mrs. Clara Thayer Perry, sixty-five, sister of former Congressman John Alden Thayer and daughter of the late Congressman Eli Thayer, was killed when she stepped from behind an elm tree at Main and Hawthorn streets in front of an automobile driven by C. Newton Prouty, Jr., of Spencer, son of a wealthy manufacturer of shoes.

Mrs. Perry's sister, Miss Ida M. Thayer, sixty-two, was struck by the right front wheel of the machine, and suffered internal injuries; a fractured and crushed left arm, and scalp wounds. Today no hope is given for her recovery.

After the accident, Prouty, who was with his wife and her sister, Miss Paine, notified the authorities of the accident. He declared, and witnesses bore him out, that the elm tree hid the women from view.

Men's Fall Suits to Your Measure $16.50

Fabrics and Trimmings such as go into Suits of about TWICE the price

There is just cloth enough left to suit 174 men. Curtain rings down Saturday night after a success in which hundreds of men have been custom-suited. Every suit cut and made up individually from the pattern you select, to your measure.

WHY? In New York is a large house who produce made-to-measure suits for less money than usual made-ready clothes cost. They make such prices because their scouts are on the alert for advantageous "buys" of woolens in two continents, and because of their tremendous output.

To keep their organization together they must have work the year round. This is a dull season. Therefore they have not only let us have their season's overstock at pronounced concessions, but they have sent some of their expert fitters to Boston for CUSTOM WEEK IN THE BASEMENT.

FABRICS—You will be surprised at the excellence of the fabrics, in view of the price. They are all GUARANTEED ALL WOOL—warranted by Filene's.

PATTERNS—Soft-finish and hard-finish worsteds, serges, checks, as well as staple grays and blues—all suited for Fall and Winter wear.

TRIMMINGS—Tailored and trimmed as well as suits usually selling for much more. Mohair linings.

Complete satisfaction warranted, in fit and all other things, or MONEY REFUNDED without quibble.

ONE FITTING—more if required.

Delivery, in two or three weeks, in order of purchase, so WALK THROUGH EARLY, applies.

As in the case of all Basement merchandise, a slight charge will be made for delivery.

A deposit of $5 on each suit required.

Woolens have been dated September 12, and those unsold at the end of the week will be made up into suits for regular stock and sold subject to our usual automatic reductions of

25% after 12 selling days
50% after 18 selling days
75% after 24 selling days

SCHOOL GIRL IS MISSING

The police of Boston and other cities and towns of Massachusetts have been asked to search for Annie Otis, thirteen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Otis of Braintree, who has been missing since Wednesday noon, when she was taken to task by a teacher in one of the Braintree schools.

Shortly after being rebuked by the teacher the girl left the school and dropped out of sight. When her daughter did not return home at night the mother was overcome with grief and the father at once started out to search for her.

Wednesday morning Annie started for school in excellent spirits. Near time for the noon recess she was reprimanded for an infraction of school rules. She did not say anything, however, to her schoolmates to indicate that she especially took the reproof to heart. When she did not attend the afternoon session not much was thought of her absence, but when she did not return home at night all concerned became alarmed.

At Braintree, Truant Officer J. F. Gallivan is leading the search for the girl. He has also visited nearby cities and towns, but no trace of the missing girl has he found.

The girl is described as of average height and has light hair, with two braids which were tied together with a large white ribbon. At school Wednesday she wore a white muslin dress, a gray raincoat, tan shoes and brown stockings. She wore no hat.

Why Suffer From Migraine or Sick Headache?
USE ANTI-KAMNIA TABLETS

Dr. J. J. Caldwell says that this exceedingly distressing disease does not shorten life, but does not appear to be cured. Sufferers from this affliction are condemned to undergo the periodical attacks every few weeks until they are forty years of age, after which the attacks are less frequent, and finally disappear entirely. Palliative measures during the attack are all that it is possible to suggest, while care in the diet is the best preventive measure. An attack may often be prevented by taking two Anti-kamnia Tablets when the first symptoms appear, and one Anti-kamnia Tablet every two hours during the attack shortens it, eases the pain and brings rest and quiet.

Anti-kamnia Tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They quickly relieve all Pain.

Sleeping accommodations have been provided with weather-proof tents and with board floors. A large marquee serves as a general dining room and a railway coach has been converted into a dressing room, while there is a corrugated iron building for a camp kitchen.

WATSON AGAIN HOTLY ATTACKS HORGAN RECORD

"Do not be influenced by any eleventh-hour attack upon me by my opponents," said City Councilman James A. (Jerry) Watson, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Eleventh District, at three outdoor rallies last night at which he addressed 2,500 enthusiastic voters.

"I have reason to believe that my opponents will flood the district at the last minute with circulars. It will be too late for me to answer you by letter, Mr. Voter, but I have given both Horgan and Fay, my opponent, who, is nothing more than a stalking horse to the candidate from Jamaica Plain, an invitation for the next three weeks to take the same platform with me in joint debate, that we might discuss our records and reply to each other's criticisms, but they have avoided the invitation.

"I have won the fight and I am only waiting for the decision next Tuesday. I am holding fast until then.

"Senator Horgan, why don't you come on the platform as I asked you at Ruggles and Cabot street a week ago? You evade the question and you still stand back. Don't you think the citizens want an opportunity to judge the candidates? Why were you absent when the bill to abolish the death penalty was called and the vote was 36 to 86?

"Citizens, would any red blooded Democrat have any use for such a cold blooded Democrat, which apparently fits Mr. Horgan, who was absent when this vote was taken?

"Now are we to judge you, Mr. Horgan, from your votes and absence on bills for important measures?"

Other speakers with the candidate were former Representative McGivern, City Councillor John A. Coulthurst, John P. Feeney, John Winterson and H. M. Comerford, recording secretary of the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers.

Mr. Watson will hold rallies tonight at Humboldt avenue and Walnut avenue, Heath square and Frances street and Huntington avenue. A reception has also been arranged by the Jamaica A. A.

The candidate has planned whirlwind tours of the district for tomorrow night and Monday night.

AMERICAN DOLLARS FOR American Pay Envelopes

Dandruff Surely Destroys The Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon, apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

JANE ADDAMS URGES WOMEN TO JOIN HEARST CAMPAIGN FOR ENDING WAR

BOSTON RESOLUTIONS JOIN IN PEACE DEMAND

Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, who came to Boston to deliver an address in the Wilbur Theatre on "Women's Relation to Peace," held under the auspices of the Boston Equal Suffrage Association, praises the Hearst newspapers for their campaign in behalf of peace. She also favors the suggestion of Mr. Hearst for appointing an international peace commission, but thinks a woman should be one of its members, as women are just as interested in man, nation and nation. It denies Christ's law of first valuation, which is that man is not made for governments, but governments are made for man; that man is an immortal soul and of immortal value and not food for cannon.

"For war is organized, legalized, glorified murder. But Christianity is not a failure—we are the failures—and the call comes to crown Christ still as Master and Lord."

CALLS WOMEN TO AID PEACE.

Miss Addams said:

"Your peace meeting on Boston Common was almost the first thing I heard about in coming to Boston. This is a movement along the right lines. It must be followed up. Let the children in our public schools hold their own peace meetings under the supervision of the teachers, and if need be, let us have parades in behalf of peace.

"Never was the time so opportune as the present to talk peace.

"The International Peace Commission suggested by Mr. Hearst and endorsed by Vice-President Marshall is a wise step. It must be carefully handled. At the present time it requires more prudence to handle peace than war. On this commission, I would suggest one woman should be appointed. Women of today are intensely interested in peace.

"The publicity which the Hearst newspapers have given this wave of peace going throughout the United States is very commendable. The Hearst newspapers are using great influence in a noble cause.

MUST STOP CARNAGE.

"It would be my idea, as has been suggested by the Hearst newspapers, that peace meetings be held in every large centre. Let everyone get familiar with what war means. Make the growing child get the right impression. There is the stupidity of war, its wretchedness, its horrors, and its crimes.

"Let us end war. Let us call in the women to help end it. It is barely possible the world will now listen to women after having this awful war in Europe, and her voice for peace and protection of the innocent and helpless ones may stop the carnage of any future warfare."

At the meeting in the Wilbur Theatre, Mrs. Glendower Evans presented the following resolution, which was adopted amid much cheering and waving of handkerchiefs:

Whereas, war is the enemy of civilization and a survival of barbarism, and its evils fall with crushing weight upon women and children, be it

Resolved, That we call upon women everywhere to urge the substitution of peace and arbitration for war; and we urge men everywhere to give the influence of the race a voice in public affairs, in order to hasten the day when war shall be no more.

PASTOR DEMANDS PEACE.

The Rev. Dr. George L. Cady, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Dorchester, said today:

"With the international peace commission, as suggested by Mr. Hearst, I am in hearty accord, for it is impossible to conceive of anyone being a Christian and not endorsing and fighting for a movement which looks toward peace in our world.

"War is organized infidelity. War is materialism massed against all spiritual forces and hope. War is the very incarnation of atheism, for it is denial of all the fundamental teachings which Christ taught and for which He died. The present war is the bankruptcy of European Christianity, a demonstration of what a thin veneer it all is over civilization which is pagan at heart.

"It denies the very law of arbitration which Jesus laid down for the conduct of affairs between man and

Jane Addams Endorses Hearst Plan for Peace

The International Peace Commission suggested by William Randolph Hearst and endorsed by Vice-President Marshall is a wise step. The publicity the Hearst newspapers have given this movement is very commendable. The Hearst newspapers are using great influence in a noble cause. It would be my idea, as they suggest, that peace meetings be held in every large centre. Let us end war. Let us call women in to help.—Jane Addams of Chicago in Boston interview.

The LAST SHOT

By FREDERICK PALMER

READ THIS SYNOPSIS FIRST.

Marta Galland and her mother live on the frontier between the country of the Browns, their own, and the country of the Grays. By their house winds a road through the pass in the range. To hold the pass is to hold the range.

Their house was built by the first Galland on the land that his king had given him for one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the pass. Beyond the house rises the ruins of a castle centuries old, its tower still intact.

Among the friends of the Gallands, two are prominent. One is Lanstron, the young chief of intelligence on the Brown general staff, who first met Marta ten years before as the result of an aeroplane accident. The other is Westerling, vice-chief of staff of the Grays and usual chief in all but name, whose high rank Marta had predicted ten years before.

Marta, who has travelled round the world, is visiting the Gray capital, and Westerling calls upon her. She tells him that for nations to fight is as foolish as for neighbors to quarrel, and declares herself at war with all frontiers.

She tells him that she is teaching a class of children at La Tir, near her home, to abhor war, and is making them take an oath that when they grow up they will never cross a frontier to kill their fellow men. She urges him to prevent a war between his country and hers, for she declares, "you will not win!"

Under the pretence of manoeuvres, the Fifty-third of the Browns starts for La Tir, on the same day that the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth of the Grays starts for South La Tir, Brown regiment stops on the way to rest.

Herbert Stransky, a giant of a man and the best shot in his company, declares that there won't be any war, because there are thousands of enlightened men in each army who will drilly but, when battle comes, will refuse to fight. His comrades are angry and a sergeant grasps him by the collar. Lanstron comes upon the scene and suggests that when the pinch comes Stransky will fight all right.

Lanstron, who is a great favorite with Partow, chief of staff of the Browns, is chief aerostatic officer as well as chief of intelligence.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

NOW that Lanstron was the organizer of the aviation corps his own flights were rare. Mostly they were made to La Tir. His visits to Marta were his holidays. All the time that she was absent on her journey around the world they had corresponded. Her letters, so revealing of herself and her peculiar angles of observation, formed a bundle sacredly preserved. Her mother's joking reference about her drastic resolution not to marry a soldier often recurred to him. There, he sometimes thought, was the real obstacle to his great desire.

When he alighted from the plane he thrust his left hand into his blouse pocket. He always carried it there, as if it were literally sewn in place. In moments of emotion the scarred nerves would twitch as the telltale of his sensitiveness; and this was something he would conceal from others no matter how conscious he was of it himself. He found the Galland veranda deserted. In response to his ring a maid came to the open door. Her face was pale, with a beauty that had prematurely faded. But it lighted pleasurably in recognition. Her hair was thick and tawny, lying low over the brow; her eyes were a softly luminous brown and her full lips sensitive and yielding.

Lanstron, an intimate of the Galland household, knew her story well and the part that Marta had played in it.

Some four years previously, when a baby was in prospect for Minna, who wore no wedding ring, Mrs. Galland had been inclined to send the maid to an institution, "where they will take good care of her, my dear. That's what such institutions are for. It is quite scandalous for her and for us never happened in our family before!"

Marta arched her eyebrows.

"We don't know!" she exclaimed softly.

"How can you think such a thing, let alone saying it—you, a Galland!" her mother gasped in indignation.

"That is, if we go far back," said Marta. "At all events, we have no precedent, so let's establish one by keeping her."

"But for her own sake! She will have to live with her shame!" Mrs. Galland objected. "Let her begin afresh in the city. We shall give her a good recommendation, for she is really an excellent servant. Yes, she will readily find a place among strangers."

"Still, she doesn't want to go, and it would be cruel to send her away."

"Cruel! Why, Marta, do you think I would be cruel? Oh, very well, then we will let her stay!"

* * * * *

"Both are away at church, Mrs. Galland ought to be here any minute, but Miss Galland will be later because of her children's class," said Minna. "Will you wait on the veranda?"

He was saying that he would stroll in the garden when childish footsteps were heard in the hall, and after a curly head had nestled against the mother's skirts its owner, reminded of the importance of manners in the world where the stork had left her, made a curtsey. Lanstron shook a small hand which must have lately been on intimate terms with sugar or jam.

"How do you do, flying soldier man?" chirruped Clarissa Eileen. It was evident that she held Lanstron in high favor.

"I do hear you say your name, Clarissa."

Clarissa Eileen was triumphant. She had been waiting for days with the revelation when he should make that real request. Now she enunciated it with every vowel and consonant correctly and primly uttered; indeed, she repeated it four or five times in proof of complete mastery.

"A pretty name. I've often wondered how you came to give it to her," said Lanstron to Minna.

"You do like it!" exclaimed Minna with girlish eagerness. "I gave her the most beautiful name I could think of because"—she laid her hand caressingly on the child's head and a madonna-like radiance stole into her face—"because she might at least have a beautiful name when"—the dull blaze of a recollection now burning in her eyes—"when there wasn't much prospect of many beautiful things coming into her life; though I know, of course, that the world thinks she ought to be called Margie."

Proceeding leisurely along the main path of the first terrace, Lanstron followed it past the rear of the house to the old tower. Long ago the moat that surrounded the castle had been filled in. The green of rows of grapevines lay against the background of a mat of ivy on the ancient walls, which had been cut away from the loopholes set with window glass. The door was open, showing a room that had been cut in by a ceiling of boards from the walls to the circular stairway that ran aloft from the dungeons. On the floor of logs were cheap rugs. A number of seed and nursery catalogues were piled on a round table covered with a brown cloth.

"Hello!" Lanstron called softly. "Hello!" he called louder and yet louder.

Receiving no answer, he retraced his steps and seated himself on the second terrace in a secluded spot in the shadow of the first terrace wall, where he could see anyone coming up the main flight of steps from the road. When Marta walked she usually came from town by that way. At length the sound of a slow step from another direction broke on his ear. Some one was approaching along the path that ran at his feet. Around the corner of the wall, in his workman's Sunday clothes of black, but wearing his old straw hat, appeared Feller, the gardener. He paused to examine a rose bush and Lanstron regarded him thoughtfully.

As he turned away he looked up, and a glance of definite and unfaltering recognition was exchanged between the two men. They had the garden to themselves.

"Gustave!" Lanstron exclaimed under his breath.

"Lanny!" exclaimed the gardener, turning over a branch of the rose bush. He seemed unwilling to risk talking openly with Lanstron.

"You look the good workman in his Sunday best to a T!" said Lanstron.

"Being stone-deaf," returned Feller, with a trace of drollery in his voice, "I hear very well—at times. Tell me"—his whisper was quivering with eagerness—"shall we fight? Shall we fight?"

"We are nearer to it than we have ever been in our time," Lanstron replied.

The hat still shaded Feller's face, his stoop was unchanged, but the branch in his hand shook.

"Honest?" he exclaimed. "Oh, the chance of it! The chance of it!"

"Gustave!" Lanstron's voice, still low, came in a note of sympathy, and the pocket which concealed his hand gave a nervous twitch as if it held something alive and distant from his own being. "The trial wears on you! Do you want to go?"

"No!" Feller shot back irritably. "No!" he repeated resolutely. "I don't want to go! I mean to be game—I—" He shifted his gaze from the bush which he still pretended to examine and suddenly broke off with: "Miss Galland is coming!"

Lanstron started toward the steps that Marta was ascending. She moved leisurely, yet with a certain springy energy that suggested that she might have come on the run without being out of breath or seeming to have made an effort.

"Hello, stranger!" she called as she saw him, and quickened her pace.

"Hello, pedagogue!" he responded.

As they shook hands they swung their arms back and forth like a pair of romping children for a moment.

"We had a grand session of the school this morning, the largest class ever!" she said. "And the points we scored off you soldiers! You'll find disarmament already in progress when you return to headquarters. We're irresistible, or at least," she added, with a flash of intensity, "we're going to be some day."

"So you put on your war-paint!"

"It must be the pollen from the hydrangeas! She flicked her handkerchief from her belt and passed it to him. "Show that you know how to be useful!"

He performed the task with deliberate care.

"Heavens! You even have some on your ear and some on your hair; but I'll leave it on your hair; it's rather becoming. There you are!" he concluded.

"Off my hair, too!"

"Very well. I always obey orders." "I oughtn't to have asked you to do it at all!" she exclaimed with a sudden change of manner as they started up to the house. "But a habit of friendship, a habit of liking to believe in one's friends was uppermost. I forgot. I oughtn't even to have shaken hands with you!"

"Marta! What now, Marta?" he asked.

ALLIES FEEL SURE OF ULTIMATE VICTORY

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Frank admission was made today that neither the Germans nor the allies have scored any decisive advantage in the great battle which has raged for six days along the Aisne river and eastward across the Meuse.

The French and British artillery has failed to dislodge the invaders from their strongly entrenched positions on the heights along the Aisne and north of Rheims. But the vigor of the allies' assaults has compelled the invaders to remain upon the defensive.

Paris awaits the outcome without trepidation. A feeling of confidence exists that the French and British will ultimately triumph and there are no fears that the capital will again be put in jeopardy of attack.

General Gallieni, the French military governor, believes that the battle will continue for some days yet upon the present field.

"The Germans are far from their ammunition depots and compelled to keep up a constant bombardment," said General Gallieni. "The allies can afford to wait and to refresh their troops before making a grand assault along the line. At the present time the conflict seems a battle mainly of artillery duel, but I look for a decisive turn when our heavier batteries at the front are reinforced. The Germans now hold strong positions, but I think that they will not be able to maintain them.

CONFIDENCE IN LEADERS.

"The people have confidence in the strategy of General Joffre and Field Marshal French. The troops believe in them implicitly. The allies will doubtless maneuver to swing a flank attack against the weak position in the German lines after a long, hard bombardment. It may be two weeks before the final stage of battle is reached, but we believe that there can be but one result, victory for the allies."

It is believed that at least 2,700,000 men are engaged along the mighty battle front from Noyon to Reims and Thiancourt, east of the Meuse. So far, however, there has been but little work for the infantry and cavalry, the issue being waged with heavy artillery.

The French troops on the right flank from Soupes eastward across the Meuse are exerting tremendous pressure against the armies of the German Crown Prince and Crown Prince Rupert of Bavaria. While the Germans have showed their teeth in several counter attacks, all of which the French War Office claims were repulsed, they have showed no disposition to take the offensive along their entire line. They are apparently content to remain in the strong positions they hold, for, in order to take them at the point of the bayonet, the French and British must expose themselves to a merciless fire of artillery, machine guns and small arms.

FORTIFYING POSITION.

For nearly six days and nights the Germans have been fortifying their positions. Immense lines of earthworks have been thrown up on the west bank of the Oise, on the heights along the north bank of the Aisne and at every other advantageous point north of Rheims, in the Argonne district and clear across to the Woevre district on the east side of the Meuse.

Batteries have been masked upon the heights, commanding the approaches to the German positions.

Trees have been felled and the branches sharpened to stem the charges of the allies. Barbed wire entanglements have been stretched and pits dug to entrap the infantrymen and cavalrymen. Every precaution shows more strongly the intention of the Germans to stake all upon their present stand. Defeat here, in all probability, would mean the evacuation of France.

The British and their French supports have been exerting strong pressure against the battered right flank of the German army under the sturdy General von Kluck. It is reported that the French endeavored to seize several hills around Solesmes which would command the heights held by German batteries in that region, and the movement is believed to be proceeding even yet.

FRENCH ADDRESSES TROOPS.

The British troops have been inspired by an address delivered by General French. The British field marshal rode in front of his troops and delivered a stirring appeal to them, modified somewhat after the nature of Napoleon's electrifying proclamations. Words from this silent general had double effect. The troops stood at attention, and when the general had ceased, the soldiers broke into cheers.

CHILD DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

On Face and Hands. Got Larger, Itching and Burning. Could Not Sleep. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Eczema Gone.

Unionville, Mo.—"My baby began to be awfully fussy and little pimples broke out on his face and hands. They began to grow larger all the time and a large scab formed. The child was very much disfigured and the itching and burning were so bad that he could not sleep. The little pimples came to a white head, then they festered and became running sores. We would try to scratch them and I used to keep his hands tied up or he would tear himself to pieces.

"I tried a treatment and afterward got some salve but they didn't do any good. I then read in the paper of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bought a bar of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and the eczema was soon entirely gone." (Signed) Mrs. Bessie Leighton, Jan. 31, 1914.

Fiery Blood Disorders Checked

The Sources of Disease are Cleaned and Blood Purified

Those who have used S. S. S. marvel at the way it checks blood diseases. See a man today with his skin all broken out; see him again in a week or two after using S. S. S. and he is a wonder to behold, all cleared up, skin healthy, eyes bright, a big smile replaces the droop. What is S. S. S. that can accomplish such wonderful results? First of all it is a natural medicine. Like milk, eggs and other foods that can not be imitated, S. S. S. owes it to Nature for its power to overcome disease just as food prevents emaciation. S. S. S. is not a combination of prescription drugs. It is a preparation direct from medicinal plants that retains all the virile potency of what we need, what we must have in the blood to counteract those destructive tendencies that assail us throughout life. For it were not for our natural secretions to sustain us, aided by such known helps as S. S. S. there would be small chance of any of us surviving childhood.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today from any druggist but be careful to avoid the substitutes palmed off on the unwary. S. S. S. is prepared only by The Swift Specific Co., 83 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and for private medical advice write briefly your symptoms to their medical department. They will take excellent care of you.

Loyalty and Sentiment in Business

THE rejuvenation of Oak Hall—the oldest retail clothing establishment in Boston—and probably the first in America, will make another page in Boston's Commercial History.

It will be classed as one of my Greatest Achievements—greatest because I not only save to Boston this long-established, splendid concern, but I reopen it better stocked than any of its competitors—more modern in myriad ways—and I set the pace for others to follow.

The Opening of a Real, Ideal Clothing Store

Hundreds of Bostonians have come to me on the opening days to express their loyalty to me and their admiration of the rejuvenated store. BERLIN AND PARIS CLAIM GAINS AT THE RIVER AISNE--BATTLE STILL RAGES

ARMIES ARE ENGAGED ALONG WHOLE LINE

from members of all parties, especially when an appeal was made to the patriotism of the nation.

"After every effort of my government to preserve the peace of the world," declared King George, "I was compelled, in the assertion of treaty obligations, which had been deliberately set at naught, and for the protection of public law in England, to go to war.

"We are fighting for a worthy purpose and we will not lay down our arms until that purpose is achieved.

"I rely on the confidence upon my subjects' efforts upon which we pray for the blessing of God."

The House of Commons was crowded; the galleries were filled. The royal speech had been eagerly awaited knowing that it would be devoted to England's part in the great war. The people were anxious to hear the appeal from the throne

KING THANKS SUPPORT.

When the King's speech made reference to the navy and army this was the signal for a demonstration. "The vital interests of my empire compelled us to go to war," declared the King towards the end of his address. "My navy and army have sustained their reputation with the faithful allies with unceasing vigilance, courage and skill in this just and righteous cause.

"From every part of the empire there has been enthusiastic loyalty to the flag. I thank you for the liberality wherewith you have met this great emergency."

The royal speech was read. At its conclusion all the members of Commons and the members of the House of Lords, who had passed to the lower chamber to hear the reading of the address, together with the spectators and members of the press gallery, rose and sang "God Save the King."

Parliament was prorogued until October 27th.

The latest news to filter through today from the 120-mile battle line of the Germans and allies was the announcement that the Germans have suffered defeat at Nancy. A Bordeaux dispatch says:

BORDEAUX, Sept. 18.—Official announcement of the defeat of the Germans in their attack upon Nancy is given in a dispatch received at the War Office today from General Durand, the military governor there, which said:

"Thanks to the success of our armies and the brave resistance of the troops all danger to the former capital of Lorraine is averted."

The government's pleasure of the situation at Nancy is increased by the fact that Emperor William is understood to have been with the German troops there during part of the attack.

Allies' Forces Failing, Says Berlin War Office

By FREDERICK WERNER,
American Staff Correspondent.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—by wireless via Sayville, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Official announcement was made by headquarters today that the German army is advancing slowly but surely in the battle which is still raging in France. The statement follows:

"The battle between the Oise and the Meuse still continues. There are sure indications that the enemy's forces are failing. The French attempt to cut through the German right wing was broken down without notable exertion on the German side.

"The German army is advancing slowly but surely. A sortie from Verdun on the right bank of the Meuse was most easily repulsed.

"The general staff states that all the German airships are coming up to expectations in long and dangerous flights. Some were damaged, but all of them repaired. None was destroyed or captured by the enemy."

Nancy is the former capital of the old French province of Lorraine, before the province was taken by Germany. It is less than twenty miles from the French border and is guarded on the west by the heavy fortifications of Toul. The Nancy entrenchments have been heavily attacked by the German left and the evident abandonment of the assault would indicate that the Germans have been pressed so hard from the south and west that they could not continue the Nancy action.

The tenseness of the situation increases in all the European capitals as the battle of the Aisne continues and decisive result is still to be known. The Berlin war office feels constrained to explain to the worried people that it cannot tell all the news lest it hamper military movements. Germany's latest official statement and the war office's explanation for secrecy are contained in a Berlin dispatch:

BERLIN (via Amsterdam), Sept. 18.—The situation on the front in France is unchanged, says an official statement issued here today.

Taking cognizance of the demand for more information,

Germans Repulsed, Says Paris, in Official Report

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK
American Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Official announcement was made here at 3 o'clock this afternoon that the left wing of the allies is making slow progress at certain points and that counter attacks by the Germans against the English army have been repulsed. The official statement follows:

"The battle has continued along the whole front from the Oise to the region of Noevre during the entire day of the seventeenth without important changes in the situation at any point.

"On our left wing on the heights at the north of the Aisne we have made slow progress at certain points. Three attempts by the Germans to take the offensive against the English army have met with decisive check from Craonne.

At Reims we have also repulsed with great vigor three violent counter attacks made a night. The enemy has vainly tried to take the offensive against Rheims.

"At the centre from Rheims to the Argonne the enemy has strengthened its position with important fortified works and has adopted a purely defensive attitude.

"On the east from Argonne to the Noevre region the situation is unchanged.

"On our right wing (Lorraine and the Vosges the enemy occupies positions organized for defence in the vicinity of the frontier."

A blacksmith shop and garage owned by Thomas F. Welch at No. 2218 Center street, West Roxbury, was destroyed by fire early today. The loss was $5,000.

as [illegible] made [illegible] necessaries, the [illegible] issued this statement:

"Referring to the opinions expressed here that [illegible] own interest Germans should publish a larger number and more detailed reports from the battlefield as the foreign press is daily getting [illegible] reports from our enemies.

"That [illegible] is all perfectly true, [illegible] published dispatches [illegible] large [illegible] services. That is the only reason [illegible] special staff is keeping [illegible] operations on the battlefield secret.

France is raising a new army simultaneous with the four new army corps that Kitchener demands from England. The information is official, as follows:

BORDEAUX, Sept. 18.—France has begun the formation of a new [illegible] to be put into the field against the Germans at the earliest possible moment. It is learned at the war office that it will be composed of Territorials and recruits.

General Galliou, the Military Governor of Paris, admits that the battle of the Aisne may take several days but he declares that when the [illegible] artillery arrives the Germans will be shelled out of their entrenched positions and driven back a second time.

French Nurse Has as Patient German Who Killed Her Son

By C. F. BERTELLI.

PARIS, Sept. 18 — The following most remarkable human document is absolutely authentic, but for obvious reasons I am unable to reveal the real names of the persons concerned. It is a letter sent by a French Red Cross nurse to the mother of a wounded German soldier in her care. The letter follows:

Madame: Your son is seriously wounded. His life depends entirely on the assiduous care of myself, his nurse.

While at his bedside, I think of my own son, who, lying helpless on a battlefield, only slightly wounded, was cowardly finished by a revolver bullet by one of your soldiers, now under my care.

I am not a saint. My revenge is easy. Tonight an extra dose of morphine will do justice for the death of my son.

I am sending you here the last good-bye of your son.

(Signed) MISS M. A.
Red Cross Nurse.

Postscript. Madame, your son is alive. He will be well within two weeks. I have merely wanted to make you live for a minute the long hours of inconsolable mourning which now will be my life.

CARDS PLAY FINAL GAME OF SEASON AND SERIES WITH BRAVES BATTLERS TODAY

JAMES WILL TRY HAND TODAY AT BEATING CARDS

will die down—will put the Braves safely out in front of the other contenders in the National scramble before many playing days have passed.

GIANTS UNABLE TO GAIN.

The Reds, despite the return of Herzog to the game, proved unyielding for the Giants yesterday, but the McGraw outfit won a little ground. The Braves as we know, won ease, so the margin between first and former champions is still three and a half games.

With the season at that stage where a win for the pace makers is worth two victories earlier in the year, it will be merely a matter of time before the trailers give up the ghost.

As Pittsburgh comes to Fenway tomorrow and the Giants start to entertain the Cubs, there's mighty little prospect of gain in sight for the Big Town outfit.

The Pirates have been the closest part of game for the stallings sensations all season long, and while the Cubs have fallen before the Giants with more or less regularity, the difference is all in favor of the leaders.

Matters just now are as follows

	W.	L.	Behind Leader.
Braves	77	55
Giants	74	59	3½ games
Cubs	72	64	7 games
Cardinals	71	64	7½ games

As the Giants have not, for months, known the inability of the Braves to win games, it's not at all surprising that President Gaffney and Secretary Nickerson of the Braves are being literally buried under tons of world's series applications.

JAMES OR DAVIS TODAY.

So far as the present session with the Cardinals goes, either Willie Doak or Dan Griner look like the Huggins box selections. The latter has held Boston down fairly well this season, though he has not been on them much, while Doak has proved his right to be considered a topliner all year long.

If "Miracle Man" Stallings does not work Bill James this afternoon, he will have "spiritual" George Davis ready to fling. But the chances are that the youthful wonder will be held over for next week, when three double-headers will make up part of the Braves program.

We might mention in passing that Dick Rudolph, after a decidedly unpropitious start, went along yesterday in a fashion that will make him a very dangerous man for the Mackmen to face.

As Johnny Evers says, Dick knows as much baseball as any pitcher in the game today, not even excepting Matty, and he looks better every time he wrote out.

Bill James, who, as we mentioned is likely to work this afternoon, is not a whole lot behind little Rick ard in craftiness and is gifted with a lot more speed. So the hopes of the Debating Society hurn rather low Which is just as it should be

Stage Wing Wins Only Fall when Mat Men Refuse to Stop

The wrestling match between Yousouf Hussaine of Bulgaria and Cyclone Burns at the Grand Opera House ended in a draw, neither man securing a fall in one hour, the time limit.

When time was called the men refused to stop and, locked in each other's embrace, they worked their way off the mat and into the scenes, knocking down two of the wings.

Referee George V. Tobey followed the men around trying to separate them, and several of the stage hands gave assistance. Finally one of the big wings fell on top of the wrestlers and they crawled out, none the worse for their experience.

Lawrence-N. London Third Game of Series on This Afternoon

The third game of the series between New London and Lawrence is played this afternoon at Lawrence.

The New London team, with Manager McCann, attended the game yesterday at Fenway Park and left for Lawrence last evening, confident of holding their own with the scrappy youngsters from the Mill City.

Each team has won a game and look very evenly matched. Quite a large party will be present from New London, including President Plant of the Connecticut Club and a large delegation from Lowell, Haverhill and other New England League cities

COMING—the bright-cheeked skating girl, with her furs and toque, her gay sashes and woolly sweaters, her knight at her rough-shod feet buckling on her flashing runners to the tune of her laughter, the crackling trees with their muffling of snow, the sky clear like the thrilling note that rings inside a bell, the pond-sheet stretching like a blue-gray dulled mirror slashed and marred with the winged skates and ringing with their grinding song. Coming—the skating-girl and ice—and snow! Oo-o-o-o!

Going—the summer-girl of the sea—riding the jade breakers with their torn lace trimmings—headed with the salt water on eyelashes and nose and ear tips—glistening and brown—black-clad, with arms and throat bare to the wind and the water and the sun, like golden buds emerging from an ebony sheath—short-skirted, comfy from head to foot, revelling in the warm heart of summer-time and rioting in the last little stingy days that are left. Edith Breaks Her Engagement to Ralph and the Latter Plans to Leave Town

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER LV.

EDWARD DAYTON accepted with pleased alacrity Mrs. Hale's invitation to "stay to dinner."

"I was on my way from the city," he explained, "when I met Miss Edith, so I have not dressed for the evening. But I do want to accept your delightful invitation—so I hope you will pardon my business suit."

"Indeed we will," said his hostess, while her husband, coming in at this moment, seconded her cordial remarks.

John Hale was, in truth, rather relieved to see Edward Dayton, for, like his daughter, he had been perplexed and disapproved when his wife informed him in the privacy of his dressing room that Edith was "not going to let Ralph come here to call tonight."

"She's got to stop playing fast and loose with him," the father declared. "She's either got to accept him permanently and definitely or let him go completely."

To which remark his wife deemed silence the safest reply.

Edward Dayton had admired John Hale's daughter ever since he first met her on her return from Europe a year ago, but he had not allowed himself to analyze the sensation of keen chagrin with which he learned of her engagement to Ralph Morton. This evening, as she and Edith sat together after dinner in the drawing-room, he mentioned her betrothal with the assumed lightness with which he was accustomed to conceal any serious feeling.

"I have been expecting to see Morton ended at any moment," he said. "I am in no hurry to have him come—for when he does I must be unanimous and do as I would want to be done by in similar circumstances—and get out."

"Why?" Edith asked gravely.

Her companion laughed embarrassedly. "Because," he replied, "it would be only fair. When a man is engaged, you know, he has a right—"

"Please," she interrupted in a low, pleading tone, "please let me explain to you—as to a true friend—that which others do not know. Ralph Morton and I are not engaged."

EDITH DECLARES SHE IS NOT ENGAGED TO RALPH

"I suppose you mean," the man ventured, "that you do not call it yet a regular engagement—although it is equivalent to one."

"It is not!" she denied positively. "I owe you a debt of gratitude—although you may not know it—so you have a right to the truth which I have confided to nobody else. Ralph Morton and I are not engaged—nor shall we ever be, for the best man left in the world—I do not love him."

Edward Dayton strove to suppress any manifestation of the unreasonable sense of happiness that suddenly pervaded his being. Yet it shone from his eyes as he asked:

"What do you mean when you speak of owing me a debt of gratitude, Miss Edith? You are surely mistaken. I have never been so fortunate as to do anything that would merit your gratitude or your friendship."

"Indeed you have," she insisted. Then, with downcast eyes, she told him how she had heard him try to divert gossip from her name on the night of the dinner party. "I can never forget your kindness—never!" she said.

Ned Dayton's heart gave a throb of joy as he looked at the girl. After all, she was free. Then were not his chances as good as another man's?

His had money and social position—yet dare he aspire to the hand of winning this girl's love? As he remained silent she raised her eyes to his.

"Now you know," she said gently, "why I feel I owe you a debt of kindness."

He leaned forward eagerly. "There is something I would rather have than your kindness," he said, "and that is your friendship, your liking."

She flashed a tender smile at him. "You ought to know that you have them already," she told him.

Friendship, liking—these might form a pretty good basis upon which to build a warmer feeling. Perhaps, after all, the man told himself, there was hope for him.

Edward Dayton stayed so late that Mrs. Hale had gone to her room before he left. But her husband still sat in the library reading when he heard the front door close behind his daughter's guest. Coming out into the hall the father put his arm about the girl as he bestowed her good night.

"Darling," he said warningly, "that is a nice fellow and an honorable gentleman. Don't flirt with him!"

SHE DECIDES TO FORGET ALL ABOUT RALPH!

Edith returned his scrutinizing gaze steadily. "No, dad," she replied, "I like him too much to flirt with him. But that is just between you and me, please, dad—isn't it?"

"And what about Ralph?" he asked. "You are forgetting him?"

"I would like to," she rejoined quickly. "And I shall tell him so tomorrow."

Before he could question her further she kissed him on the cheek and ran up to her room. As John Hale locked the front door and put out the lights he shook his head.

"Is she fickle or only facile?" he wondered moodily. Sad have we, by indulging and humoring her, taught her to feel no sense of responsibility? Can it be possible," frowning as a gloomy suggestion presented itself, "that we have spoiled our girl as James Morton's widow has spoiled her boy? But nonsense with an impatient movement of the shoulders, as that had been a miserable burden! If dislodging a disagreeable lover that had been thrust there against his will. "With a girl it is different. A girl can avoid being married. And when the right man comes along Edith will settle down. But I have never felt that Ralph was the right man—in spite of some noble qualities."

It was from Edith's own lips the next afternoon that John Hale received his final dismissal. She said nothing of the latter she had read, but she would not listen to his pleading. Her eyes were hard and cold as spoke with a cruelty prompted by hurt vanity, which is more bitter than wounded love.

"I don't care for you," she said incisively. Then as he attempted a vehement and reproachful protest, she threw back her head and laughed.

"Can't you see, Ralph," she taunted, "that I have been amusing myself all the time? And I'm tired of the game!"

What had wrought this change? he wondered as he walked homeward, surrounded by the wreckage of his thoughts. As he reflected on what she might have discovered, or might yet discover, he was afraid—humiliatingly afraid.

RALPH PLAYS HIS CARDS WITH CLEVERNESS

That night he confided to his mother a plan which he said had been in his mind for months. Did she not feel that it would do both him and her good to get away from Homewood? Surely she could afford it as some of her money to take them both out to Los Angeles, where Mrs. Morton's only brother was a prosperous lawyer. Ralph acknowledged that he had always longed to accept his uncle's suggestion, made several years ago, and go into partnership with him.

He was playing his cards cleverly, for he knew that the widow's desire ever since her husband's death had been to retrieve her selling home where she had lived until her marriage. But her son always rebelled against the idea.

But what about leaving Edith? she asked tremulously after she had wiped away the tears of happiness that had gushed forth at his suggestion.

"Our engagement is broken," he said briefly. "I do not want to talk of it, mother. I entered rashly into it—and I find that I do not love the girl. I acted on the impulse of the moment in asking her to marry me. It was a mistaken sense of chivalry on my part. She sees this now. And, if you love me, mother, say nothing more to me about it."

So excited was the mother at the prospect of returning to her old home and at Ralph's unselfishness in proposing it that she suppressed any words of regret at the thought that Edith's money would never be shared by her beloved son.

Interpreters will shortly be stationed at various busy centres in London, such as Piccadilly Circus, Charing Cross and London Bridge, to help strangers find their way about London and to help them in their difficulties. Twelve men, who, between them, speak fluently French, German, Italian, Swedish, Norwegian and Polish, are at present attending the London General Omnibus Company's school in Chelsea, to complete their knowledge of London.

Now that the Earl of Wemyss has passed away, the distinction of being the oldest peer in the English House of Lords falls upon the Duke of Grafton, who but recently entered his ninety-fourth year. The Earl of Courtown comes next at ninety-one, while Lord Armstead will be ninety this year. In quick succession come the Marquis of Salisbury and the Duke of Bedford, the Earl of Malmsbury and the Marquis of Abergavenny. The father of the House is the Earl of Ducie, who has been a member for sixty-one years.

A German professor has invented a process of silver-plating dead bodies, so as to convert them into durable images of the individuals as they were when in life. Gold-plate can be used if the relatives can afford it. But as the expense of silver-plating a body is £15,000, there are probably few relatives who would deem themselves justified in squandering the deceased's estate on such a memorial.

Love and Loyalty

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Love me with absolute love, faith to in fulness or naught."—Browning.

S. H. writes me as follows:

"I am twenty-four years old and am secretly engaged to a girl four years my junior. We have been friends for three years. As I work four nights a week I cannot be with her or know where she is then. When I first met her she had the reputation of occasionally flirting. I know she loves me, and our love seems to be at its supremest moment. Yet she deceived me grossly last night. She was to have met me but I can't think of living with a girl I cannot trust, though I love her better than anything in life. I love her very much to marry her and be forced to leave her. What shall I do?"

"What shall you do?" Trust the girl you love.

Faith can work miracles. If your trust of the girl you love were absolute and unquestioning the chances are absolutely ten to one that she would struggle with her baser nature in order to reward your faith with faith.

If, instead of remembering unpleasant gossip you once heard of the girl you now love, you would remember only that she is the woman you love, you would keep your mind a much healthier thing. She would feel the force of your confidence and it would help her in any struggle she might be making to be worthy of it.

THE HONOR SYSTEM

The honor system in many schools and colleges is based on this simple principle of human nature. Examinations are given, and the teachers are confident that it is being taken for granted that they will plug for keys to unholy excitement in cheating teachers who leave you free to do it is that is the sort of boy you are.

In the school of life and love the same idea applies. An atmosphere of suspicion may make a weak character seem strong, but only for a time. It is not the game, too? An atmosphere of distrust may make a weak character an distrust herself. She breathes lack of faith—she is reminded that fair play is not a simple thing to be taken for granted just as breathing is.

Say to the girl you love, bravely and sincerely: "Dear, I am not quite strong enough to forget some of the unfair things that were once insinuated to you about me. I do not think though that you will play fair. I trust you absolutely for the present. I know you wouldn't break my heart by failing me and my faith now. But I want you to help me be a brave matter—I need your help, and you are the only one who can help me. I want you to play so absolutely fair that I will be ashamed of ever having betrayed it instinctive that you were not on the level." Will you help me forget—so that we can start our married life without any handicap of haunting memories? And remember, dear, I trust you."

And to yourself, keep saying every time you think of the girl you love, "I trust you."

So you will make your own trust grow—and if the girl is not totally unworthy of your consideration she will prove worthy of that trust.

Confidence and a feeling of responsibility have a strong effect on character. It grows to meet the responsibility and expands to be worthy of the confidence.

CULTIVATE FAITH

Don't base your married life on a half love without faith. Cultivate faith—think it into being in your own heart and hers. And the miracle of a perfect love and faith will work a miracle in the heart of the girl you love if it is at all feeble.

The new experience of being trusted will become so precious to her that she will cherish it and the honest loyalty that makes her worthy of the faith you are giving her. It will come to seem to her a dastardly thing to deceive the man who loves and trusts her in the strength of an affection that makes her strong too.

The most wonderful "faith cure" in all the world is the strength of character that through its own unswerving loyalty and honesty transmutes a weaker love into a feeling that will be worthy of what is reflected of it.

The magic—it will make your own love perfect and it will encourage your sweetheart's struggling soul to be like him, pure thing you are thinking it to be.

The Things That Count

By ANN LISLE

MOST of us have a sad way of emphasizing the wrong things in life. We think that wealth, position, success, popularity and high dignities are the only things that count. They are the things that count if they are honestly gained. They are the things that cannot be attained without shameful bargainings and sacrifices of love and honor and truth. They are the things that count if they can be won without losing peace of mind.

The things that counts most of all of life is to be able to look back upon it.

If you win whatever measure of success you can attain without regretting to understand and dishonorable methods you will get happiness with your success.

Dishonest dealings may be concealed from all the world, but the heart that knows its own wrong-doing has no permanent peace.

A very wise Englishman has said that what makes life worth while is the measure of its "durable satisfactions."

And the durable satisfactions—the joys and happinesses and successes that wear well are the things that count.

First of all, never do anything for which you will have to pay some day in terms of regret and remorse.

Have you ever bought a pair of flimsy, showy slippers on credit, and had the bill for them come in just about the time they were worn out? The flimsy, tinsel joys of life are like that—if they are not worse—they won't wear well, and you will have to pay just as you are ready to pass on to something more worth while.

These are the "durable satisfactions" of life—the things that count: the doing of nothing that is unworthy of your own best self. So you will be at peace with yourself, and will never shrink from looking your own self in the face in the mirror of glass and in the mirror of life and living.

To do nothing that will shame the people who love you. So you will have the glowing satisfaction of making your dear ones proud of you.

To do nothing that fair-minded people can censure you for. So you will win a need of regard from your neighbors in life.

To grow a little each day in strength and wisdom. So you will measure up to your own possibilities and will make a place for yourself in life.

To give honest regard to the people who care for you. So you will come to be loyal and capable of deep affection, and even if now and then you are disappointed in your "friends" you will not be disappointed in your own self and will be worthy of the best when it comes to you.

To give to your work and to your play an honest attention that will make you labor well after recreation, and frolic like a good comrade when your daily toil is done.

These are the things that count. These are the things that will make your life worth while and will attract happiness and love to you.

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, the heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is which contains no dangerous narcotics or alcohol.

It helps the human system in the nutrient manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anaemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing.

In liquid or tablet form at most drug stores or send 50 centstamps for trial box to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Read Chapter VII on Circulatory Organs in the "Medical Adviser"—a French cloth-bound book of 1000 pages sent on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps, address as above.

Valuable Discovery in Complexion Beautifier

Because of its peculiar power of absorption, also because it stores away excellent purifying, delightful ingredients, Resinol Soap is the most wonderful discovered within recent years. If you use this the pores do not get clogged, but are kept open and healthy. This is not nonsense. Talk this for applying mercolized wax has been found to be very satisfactory. Wash the face with warm water, drying lightly. Remove cosmetic by ointment then and wash again with the soap. Do this for several days. This is a simple way to use before retiring, allowing it to remain on all night and washing it off in the morning with rain water. All druggists have this wax in original one-ounce packages.

For the removal of a wrinkles or flabby condition there's nothing better than to bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving 1 ounce powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Household results are quick and surprising.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Their Married Life

Warren Has a Bad Attack of Neuralgia and Scorns a Doctor, but Finally Gives In.

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

"I WISH you would let me send for the doctor, Warren. Please let me telephone for him, won't you?"

"No, I don't want a doctor nosing around. It isn't likely he could do me any good, anyway?"

"But you're not eating any dinner, dear, and I did try to have everything you liked tonight. I'm afraid you're going to be sick."

Warren broke a piece of bread savagely, and did not deign to answer. He had been complaining for a couple of days of a toothache which he did not seem able to locate. Helen had suggested neuralgia. She was subject to attacks of neuralgia herself, but Warren had scoffed at the idea and had even refused to see a dentist, and now the pain was almost unbearable.

Helen observed him with anxious eyes, although she went on with her dinner without making any more remarks. Warren went on eating with grim fortitude until at last a less cautious bite of a piece of celery made him wince with unexpected pain and he pushed his plate away and looked across at Helen.

"Can't you do anything but look at me with that dying calf expression? he remarked unreasonably, and then, "I can't eat anything more anyway, there's no need of trying."

"I wish there was something I could do," Helen said, resolved to be pleasant no matter how hard a task that might be. "Shall I get the hot water bottle? That always helps me, and I bought a new one just the other day."

WARREY ENGRACIOUSLY REFUSES COMFORT

"No, what's the use? Didn't I have one all last night and it didn't do me a bit of good."

"Then I certainly think you should see a doctor," said Helen firmly, "let me call up the nice one down stairs, the one who fixed Nora's arm."

"Nice one," sneered Warren. "I suppose you think he's nice because he happens to be young and good-looking. Likes to have him come up whether it's necessary or not, eh?"

Helen felt like laughing in spite of the tone of voice Warren used.

"No, dear, we won't have him if you don't like him."

"I didn't say I didn't like him," irritably. "How do I know whether I'd like him or not; I've never seen him, have I?"

Nora, bringing the dessert in, Mr. Curtis is finished," as Nora appeared in answer to Helen's ring.

"I don't want any of any dessert," growled Warren, his hand up to his face.

"But, dear, it's peach shortcake. Don't you think you could eat a little of it, its so good?"

Nora brought the cake to Helen to cut, and Warren eyed the toothsome layers disapprovingly. The cake looked delightfully enough for any one with the dintinct appetite Imagine with whipped cream filling.

"I'll be dining myself," said Helen, as she cut him a generous slice. "You'll eat a small piece, won't you?"

"Do you call that a small piece?" said Warren, as Nora placed the plate before him. "Bring me some hot water, Nora, a large cup. I think the best might do me good."

"I think I'll go down to the dentists myself," said Warren, finally, as they rose from the table. "There's no use my staying awake all night again and he might be able to do something for me."

"All right, and if he says there is nothing the matter with your teeth you will not be disappointed in your self and will be worthy of the best when it comes to you."

"You give to your work and to your play an honest attention that will make you labor well after recreation, and frolic like a good comrade when your daily toil is done.

These are the things that count. These are the things that will make your life worth while and will attract happiness and love to you.

the hot-water bag. I'm almost tired enough to fall asleep, anyway."

Helen went back to the living room and turned out the light; then she went into the bathroom for hot water.

The water had been running for some time before she realized that it wasn't hot enough. The water should be very hot to do any good at all. She would have to heat it.

WARREY FINDS FAULT WITH HELEN'S EFFORTS

It took some time to find a basin and fill it, but after the water was in the gas stove for a few minutes it began to boil and she had the bag filled in a minute with hot water.

"You were gone a confounded long time," growled Warren from the bed, as she came into the room.

"I had to heat the water, dear," she explained patiently. "Nora has gone out and there wasn't enough hot water to do you any good at all."

"Well, hand it here; don't stand there fidgeting about if any longer."

Helen snatched a towel from the table where the pile of fresh laundry had not been put away and arranged the hot-water bag carefully under Warren's face. These she turned off the light.

It seemed hours later when she awoke with the light shining in her eyes to see Warren standing before her dresser, his face swollen up to twice its size and the hot water bottle held up against his cheek.

"Is the pain so bad? Shall I get more hot water or will you have a doctor?"

"If you're so set on having a doctor, why don't you call him up?" he growled at last. And Helen, only too glad of the chance, flew into the next room.

"I called up Dr. Bradley," she explained as she came back to him and took the hot water bottle out to be refilled. "He'll be up in a minute, it's only eleven o'clock, did you know it?"

A moment later she was admitting the young physician down stairs, who examined Warren's jaw in a professional manner, pronounced it a bad attack of neuralgia brought on by exposure, gave him a sleeping potion and left a bottle of liniment to be rubbed in to take down the swelling and relieve the pain.

How little pain a man can bear without letting the whole world know about it, was her last waking thought, and Warren was no exception to the general rule.

(A further instalment of this story of everyday life will appear soon.)

'Twas a Pearl of a Lake

The aviator's wife was taking her first trip with her husband in his airship.

"Wait a moment, George," she said, "I am afraid we will have to do that again."

"What's wrong?" asked the husband.

"I believe I have dropped one of my pearl buttons over the side, and think I can see it glistening on the ground."

"Keep your seat, my dear," said the aviator; "that's Lake Superior."

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy flesh there for should try eating a little Sargol with each meal for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. Weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol tablets with your next meal—for two weeks. Then step on the scales and take a measurement of how you look or feel or what you have gained. The results and the tape measure will surprise you. Sargol helps make thin man or woman can easily add from 10 to 15 pounds about an hour first fourteen days by following this simple rule. Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat from food you eat. All this nourishment now passes from your stomach into the blood where the very same meals you are eating now are changed into rich, red blood, healthy flesh between your skin and muscles. Sargol is pleasant, effective and inexpensive.

Druggists sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee to put on flesh or money back.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Its use means prompt relief and permanent relief. Investigate this case—

"Gentlemen—For fifty or sixty years I was troubled with a bad cough, which finally developed into a high fever. My case was declared hopeless by my physicians. I was induced to try Kemp's Balsam, which I took according to directions, and was not expected to live. Calling Dr. H. H. Mitchell, who was one of Holmes's Ayr physicians, when I had taken a few doses of your medicine I felt relief, and by the time I had taken the second bottle I was entirely cured. I am pleased to give these facts to encourage others to use Kemp's Balsam."

RAILROADS EXPECTING A RATE RAISE

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

In railroad circles there is strong expectation that the Interstate Commerce Commission will not only act quickly on the request for the reopening of the eastern rate case, but grant carriers a substantial increase. This would promote confidence in American railroad securities, both in this country and in Europe, and would think it worth as much as a check as almost anything which could happen upon liquidation when stock markets reopen. Cash transactions for stocks on the July 30 closing price basis are said to be increasing. It is thought that by the time business on exchanges is resumed there will be a much larger investment demand than seemed possible recently. In fact there is continued spirit of confidence. It is no longer doubted that business conditions are somewhat better in the west and heavy and varied expenditions are likely to cause a marked change for the better along the Atlantic coast and in the middle and eastern States.

LOOKS FOR TRADE ACTIVITY.

The Federal reserve system will be in operation about the middle of next month, according to Paul M. Warburg, member of the board. He told the House Banking Committee that as soon as the new system is established there will be more trade activity in this country and financial conditions will become easier. When he spoke of the measure authorizing State banks to issue emergency currency, he said there was enough currency now but that it has been hoarded by banks and individuals. "In my opinion," he said, "an abundance of currency to meet all demands will be immediately forthcoming after the inauguration of the new Federal reserve system."

INVESTORS ARE A LEGION.

That people with money to invest are a legion was shown by the throngs at banking houses when the public sale of New York city $100,000,000 4 per cent notes took place. Never before had Wall Street made such a great offering direct to the people. Transactions ranged from buying one $500 note to enough to total $3,000,000. The notes were in demand in London, it is said, and a large part of the offering may be placed there. If this proves true and the British investors want American investments, perhaps the fear of foreign liquidation when stock markets reopen is exaggerated. The London Stock Exchange committee is expected to do something soon which would delay liquidation of American securities by Germans and Austrians in that event. The exchange rules will set a date after which certificates held by Germans or Austrians will not be a good delivery on contracts. They must be shipped to New York and retransferred back. This would delay settlement of contracts of some time.

MORE GOLD POOL TALK.

It is now said that the plan for bankers to form a $150,000,000 gold pool is made for the protection of this country's obligations in Europe, and incidentally to solve the foreign exchange problem, has not been dropped and that New York bankers will resume discussion of the matter with the Federal Reserve Board. The supply of exchange bills is increasing, but not in greater ratio than demand. The latter is growing so fast that although rates have just touched the lowest figures known in a month financiers think they may advance again unless more gold is available for paying foreign drafts. Heavy selling of cotton bills has had recent effect upon exchange, but the belief that the London readiness to accept our finance bills. It is understood that the Federal Reserve Board will not commit itself as to the gold pool plan until it has had a chance to observe the effect upon the exchange market of a settlement of what is owed already by the City of New York. Some bankers are very anxious to tender convincing assurance to foreigners that this country is able and willing to pay its debts.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

France has raised $10,000,000 war money in London through treasury bills privately placed by the Rothschilds upon a 5 per cent. interest basis.

The Bank of England now has on hand more gold than ever before in its history. The total is about $250,000,000.

It is expected that the Interstate Commerce Commission may announce tomorrow whether it will reopen the Eastern freight rate case.

The Texas & Pacific road reports for the last fiscal year a net income equal to 5.94 per cent. on the second mortgage income bonds, compared with 5.57 per cent. earned in previous year.

The Batavia, Ubber Company has declared, payable October 1, its regular quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. on the preferred stock, the regular dividend of 1¼ per cent. on common and an extra dividend of ¾ of 1 per cent. on the common stock.

Cotton exports for August were valued at $1,306,117, or about one-eighth as much as the value of that shipped in the same month last year.

FORBES URGES 'MADE-IN-U. S.' WEEK IN STORES

By B. C. FORBES.

Why not have a "Made-in-America" week of special sales in every department store, grocery store, clothing store, shoe store, jewelry store, haberdashery store, leather goods store, chemist's, tobacconist's, toy store, furniture store, glassware store, hardware store, carpet store, linen store and stationer's from one end of the United States to the other?

* * *

The idea should appeal to the patriotism of every real American.

Let the movement be taken up all over the country, let our merchants make proper preparations and insist on straightforward announcements to their local communities of what will be offered, and I venture to predict that the response will be overwhelming.

* * *

There is a lot of genuine patriotism in America. It thrives among the richest as well as among the poorest.

* * *

No more fitting occasion than the present could be imagined for a "Made-in-America" week throughout the Union, for—

* * *

The public are in a mood to respond;

* * *

The time is opportune for commanding attention to what America can do in the way of producing and manufacturing goods of quality.

* * *

Our foreign trade balance is the worst in a generation, something out of the ordinary is needed to turn the tide toward home products and away from overrated imported articles.

* * *

Our merchants and manufacturers are not without need of encouragement at this moment; and

* * *

The movement would foster employment within our own shores.

* * *

The situation at home needs all the support every one of us can give it.

* * *

And we all can give some by insisting upon American-made things every time we enter a store.

* * *

Will the newspapers of the country, merchants' associations, manufacturers' associations, advertising clubs, storekeepers and the general public care take up the suggestion, and co-operate enthusiastically in carrying it out with complete success? It is worth doing from every consideration—patriotic, economic, social, commercial and labor.

* * *

In previous articles I have called attention to the extreme desirability of keeping more American money for American pay envelopes, of cutting down out annual "invisible" payments of a billion dollars for foreign travel, and of reducing our two-billion merchandise imports by a substantial amount through ceasing to worship the "imported" label fetish.

* * *

Well, what do yesterday's official figures covering our foreign trade show?

THE AUGUST RETURNS ARE THE WORST IN A GENERATION!

AND THE EIGHT MONTHS' SHOWING IS, WITH ONE EXCEPTION, THE POOREST IN TWO DECADES!

Last month we not only failed to reduce our five billion dollars' indebtedness to Europe by selling more than we bought, but WE WENT $15,000,000 DEEPER INTO THE HOLE.

* * *

Compared with last year's, our August exports fell off $78,000,000, our purchases decreased only $8,000,000. Thus, in place of the favorable balance of over $50,000,000 shown a year ago, we had an adverse balance of more than $19,000,000.

SINCE JANUARY 1 OUR IMPORT BALANCE HAS RUN $317,000,000 BEHIND THE SAME PERIOD OF 1913.

Is there not urgent necessity, think you, for increasing upon Americans the importance of giving more of their business to fellow Americans?

* * *

The figures, too, should spell a lesson to every member of Congress, irrespective of party. What do but propose to do to remedy matters?

* * *

Remember, the end of the war will bring an unprecedented influx of immigrants from the devastated countries, for these will constitute employment must be furnished. We cannot do it if our capitalists foreigners to go on flooding this country with their cheap-labor products and driving American labor to the wall—and workers to the bread line.

* * *

Statesmen, you must take stock!

* * *

Citizens, you must do your share in stopping the country's descent into the mire of International debt.

* * *

Let us have, as one little step in the right direction, a "Made in America" week. In all our stores, with the slogan sounded in every city and countryside: "Boom—Consume 'Made in America' Goods."

American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

A dividend of Two Dollars per share will be paid on the capital stock to stockholders of record at the close of business on Wednesday, September 30, 1914.

Maine's Election Merely Proves That Republican Reactionaries Can Still Keep Democrats in Power

Our esteemed contemporary the New York World declares that the election in Maine proves three things: One, that President Wilson and his administration are stronger than ever; two, that there is no popular revolt against the new Democratic tariff; three, that the Progressive party is disintegrating and its members returning to the Republican party.

The World's deductions and conclusions are reminiscent of the story of the teacher who asked the small boy to describe a lobster. The small boy averred that a lobster was a red fish that walked backwards.

The teacher replied that the description was a very good one, except for three things: First, that a lobster was not a fish; second, that it was not red; and, third, that it did not walk backwards.

The World's description of the Maine situation is similarly entirely accurate except for three things: First, that it does not prove that President Wilson and his administration are stronger than ever; second, that it does not prove that there is no popular revolt against Democratic policies; third, that it does not prove that the Progressive party is disintegrating.

In order to draw conclusions of any value from the Maine election it is first necessary to be familiar with the facts.

The facts are that in 1912 the Progressive party and the Republican party in Maine were UNITED in support of one ticket, and that the Democratic party was beaten by the United Republican and Progressive parties by the small plurality of 3,265 votes.

In 1914, however, the Republican and Progressive parties were DIVIDED in Maine. The Republican party had its ticket in the field, the Progressive party had its ticket in the field, and still the Democratic party, with this formidable advantage, only elected its ticket by about the same small plurality as that of the Republicans in 1912.

In 1914 the Democratic party is more of a MINORITY party and had LESS votes than in 1912.

Or, to put the same fact in a still different form, in 1912 the Democratic party polled 47.7 per cent. of the total vote, but in 1914 it polled only 43 per cent. of the total vote, having in two years lost 4.7 per cent. of the total vote that year and about 10 per cent. of the vote which it polled in 1912.

In other words, out of every hundred voters who voted the Democratic ticket in 1912, ten had become dissatisfied with the Democratic party and no longer voted for it in 1914.

Compared with 1912, the Democratic vote fell off 5,916, while the combined Republican and Progressive vote increased 5,314, the total vote in each year being about the same figures.

These plain, indisputable facts, founded on figures, seem to dispose of the World's first two optimistic assumptions: First, that President Wilson and his administration are stronger than ever; second, that there is no popular revolt against any of the Democratic policies.

The election in Maine, when we proceed further to analyze and not to generalize, shows another interesting condition at variance with the World's third assumption.

It shows, first, that the Progressive party polled 17,860 votes and the Republican party 58,497 votes; second, that, if the Progressive party and the Republican party had been united, as they were two years ago, the united party would have won by a much larger majority than it did two years ago; third, that the Progressive party's vote is strong enough and likely to remain strong enough to present any election to the Democratic party, no matter how unpopular the Democratic party may be, whenever the Progressive vote and the Republican vote are cast separately.

These conclusions, accurate as they are and based on exact figures and on an intelligent understanding of the facts, would still be of no special value unless they bore a message, unless they taught a lesson.

They do bear a message to the Democratic party.

They do teach a lesson to the Republican party.

The message borne to the Democratic party is this:

The Democratic party can be as impractical as it usually is, as ignorant of the needs of the country, as indifferent to the welfare of the country as it has shown itself to be, as forgetful of its pledges, as neglectful of its principles as it has proven itself to be, as careless in the handling of our foreign business and as reckless in the treatment of our national business as it is possible for it to be, and still the Democratic party will be elected, provided the Republican party and the Progressive party are sufficiently selfish and sufficiently stupid to allow it to be.

General Grant once said that, no matter what mistakes the Republican party might make, it could always depend for its election upon the superior asininity of the Democratic party. That situation has come to be reversed, and it may now truthfully be said that, no matter what mistakes the Democratic party may make, that party may depend for its success on the paramount imbecility of the Republican party.

The lesson to the Republican party in the Maine election is this: That as long as the Republican party makes it impossible for intelligent, self-respecting, patriotic Progressives to go back into the Republican party, just so long will the Progressive defection defeat the Republican party and maintain the Democratic party in power.

The significant fact in the Maine election is not the smallness of the Progressive vote, but the largeness of it, considering that Roosevelt was not running and that there was not a single newspaper in Maine supporting the Progressive ticket.

It has often been said that when Roosevelt was not a candidate the Progressive vote would disappear. But the facts show that, although Roosevelt is not a candidate at this election, and although he is showing a very evident disposition to get back into the Republican party and become the candidate of that party in 1916, still the Progressive party continues to poll a sufficiently large vote to defeat the Republican party.

It is plainly evident that the strength of the Progressive party depends upon something else than the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt.

It depends upon the intelligence and the conscience, the conviction and the determination of the independent voters of the United States; and the independent voters of the United States are more likely to increase in numbers than they are to decrease in numbers.

The strength of the Progressive party depends and will depend upon the attitude and the action of the Republican party. The more dully and obstinately reactionary the Republican party becomes the more determined and the more determining will become the Progressive vote in the United States.

If the Republican party were as much concerned for the welfare of the nation as it professes to be, if it were as much concerned for the interests of the individual citizens as it ought to be, it would progress in its principles at least as far as the platform of the Progressive party of 1912, which is not more progressive than, and perhaps not quite as progressive as, the program of Abraham Lincoln, the founder of the Republican party.

If the Republican party is not willing to be as progressive as it was fifty years ago, it is time for it to be eliminated, and the Progressive party can not confer a greater benefit upon the country than by eliminating it.

If a visionary Democratic party is dangerous and destructive to the business of the country, to the commerce of the country and to the country's national interest and importance, a reactionary Republican party is equally dangerous and destructive to the fundamental political principles on which this government is based.

A reactionary Republican party will never again be tolerated in prolonged control of the government of the United States, and the worst thing that could happen, not only to the country, but to the Republican party itself, is for the reactionary element of the Republican party again temporarily to secure control of the government. Such a party would be ignominiously and permanently ousted at the first election, and probably would lose forever the opportunity to demonstrate any reform in its character and regain popular favor.

The other hand, a patriotic, progressive and practical party of some sort is urgently [illegible] this time by the nation and desired by the citizens of the nation.

[illegible] party which will be patriotic in its foreign relations, progressive in its political principles and competent in its economic policies would be greatly welcomed by an intelligent majority of the voters of this country, would be installed in power, and when installed in power would be able to render such service to the nation that it would deserve and receive the nation's gratitude and be retained in power for many years.

Has the Republican party the intelligence to see and grasp this opportunity? Or has it become the Bourbon party of the nation, a party which never sees and never learns?

Will the Progressive party fulfil its mission merely by teaching the Republican party its duty to the community? Or must the patriotic and progressive voters of the country look to the Progressive party and support the Progressive party as the slower but surer way of accomplishing the country's industrial and political redemption?

Letters From American Readers

IMPARTIAL WAR NEWS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I wish to congratulate the Boston AMERICAN on the impartial manner in which it is handling the news of the present distressing conflict in Europe. A great deal has been said about coloring the facts to suit the demands of the readers, and with this charge in mind I have carefully followed the articles in the Boston AMERICAN, with the result above mentioned. I also want to congratulate you on the cartoons and editorials which have appeared.

"MADE IN AMERICA" CAMPAIGN

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Permit me to express my appreciation of the very able editorials now appearing in your papers in behalf of American industry.

Such a campaign must do much toward averting a depression of the war bulletins appearing in the newspapers at this disastrous time.

I wish you all success in your good work, which we trust will continue.

CHAMPIONING PROGRESS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—By this means I desire to express my appreciation for your admirable attitude of neutrality in the European conflict and your fearless stand for justice in championing true economic progress in America.

WILLIAM H. RAUM.

"How Can I Make That Stingy Prince Divorce Me?"

This is the cry of a beautiful American girl, who has made unusual, and still unsuccessful, efforts to rid herself of a royal but parsimonious Egyptian husband.

The Princess Ibrahim Hassan wants to be free. She wants to raise her beautiful head from the yoke of matrimony. Prince Ibrahim Hassan, favorite cousin of the Khedive of Egypt, doesn't. For this reason domestic war was declared, and the campaign begun in Cairo has waged in sorely troubled Paris and continues at this moment on United States soil. It began when the American girl, who had been Olga Humphreys, the actress, protested to her royal husband against wearing the veil of the Oriental woman.

"I won't wear it," said the princess.

"You will disgrace me by the naked face," responded her Oriental lord in cold scorn. He walked haughtily away, stopping to speak to an old servant on the way. That afternoon Princess Ibrahim found her chamber door locked from the outside.

Then the princess declared war.

A VAGRANT MIND

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

SINCE early this morning the world has seemed surging
With unworded rhythm, and rhyme without thought.
It may be the Muses take this way of urging
The patience and pains by which poems are wrought.
It may be some singer who passed into glory,
With songs all unfinished, is lingering near
And trying to tell me the rest of the story,
Which I am too dull of perception to hear.

I hear not, I see not; but feel the sweet swinging
And swaying of metre, in sunlight and shade,
The still arch of Space with music is ringing
As never an audible orchestra made.
The moments glide by me, and each one is dancing;
Aquiver with life is each leaf on the tree,
And out on the ocean is movement entrancing,
As billow with billow goes racing with glee.

With never a thought that is worthy the saying,
And never a theme to be put into song,
Since early this morning my mind has been straying,
A vagabond thing, with a vagabond throng.
With gay, idle moments, and waves of the ocean,
With winds and with sunbeams, the treetops and birds,
It has lifted along in the joy of mere motion,
To songs without music and verse without words.

"Help 'Buy a Bale of Cotton' Movement," Says Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

New England should help the "Buy a Bale of Cotton" movement in every way possible, and I will gladly do my share. It is an opportune time for the people of New England, particularly the manufacturers, to show the right spirit, and I feel certain that they will do so. The South is hard hit by the war, its main source of revenue being cut in two. Imagine our situation if the manufacturing plants of New England were to run at a loss for this next year! However, if everyone who can afford it will buy a bale of cotton, the situation will be materially relieved. Considering what our fellow human beings are suffering in Europe, everyone should be willing to make some sacrifice.

THE Hearst newspapers' fight to save the Southern cotton crop has its daily bright encouragement.

Judge E. H. Gary, head of the American Steel Company, promptly, upon the suggestion, expressed his faith in the plan and forwarded his check to the Atlanta Georgian and the committee.

The big New York brokerage firm of J. S. Bache & Co. not only joins the procession, but offers to act as agent for the "Buy-a-Bale" movement without charges. It is printing a message from a Southern warehouse offering to give warehouse storage and insurance for $2.50 a year.

Ex-Governor Warfield of Maryland wires that his Fidelity and Deposit Company of Baltimore will buy and store 1,000 bales of cotton.

St. Louis interests wire an offer to take 25,000 bales—the greatest subscription to date.

Dallas, Texas, wires that its warehouses will store 1,700,000 bales.

Read and digest some of the things Mr. Hearst said Sunday morning in behalf of the "Buy-a-Bale-of-Cotton Movement":

"The war is evidently drawing to a close. A few weeks will see it ended.

"Prices of cotton will then soar, and millions and millions of dollars will be paid for cotton then that will not be paid for cotton if sacrificed in the present depression."

This means that these millions would be paid to the credit of American bankers, and stop the otherwise possibility of large exports of gold from these shores.

Mr. Hearst said:

"Whatever benefits one member will benefit all members. Whatever wealth one member succeeds in securing will be divided among all the members when the profits are distributed in national dividends."

The great grain crops of the West, sold and exported at high prices, will bring to Western bankers great accumulations of liquid money. Their greatest American customers are in the South, and they can well afford to follow the lead of Armour in Chicago and Nathan Straus, of New York, in buying American cotton, each to the extent of his interest in the great trade of that section.

Mr. Hearst says finally—which perhaps should clinch the argument, if one were needed:

"The security for his investment is in the cotton, and the reward for his action will be the added wealth which will come to our common country and the satisfaction which will be his for having done a worthy and patriotic deed."

Buy a bale of cotton at ten cents a pound now.

Vitalize the market for America's greatest export product.

Buy at fifty dollars a bale, because the South cannot make it for less and it will soon be higher, and before July 1 next the South's product will be selling at twelve cents per pound with the ending of the war in Europe before that time.

American cotton has sold at over ten cents per pound every year since 1904!

During the past three years forty-five million bales have been sold by the South at over $60 per bale!

Perhaps during the last half century cotton has not sold continuously for one year more than five times under ten cents a pound.

The State of Georgia will have 500,000 bales picked, ginned and ready for delivery this month.

If sold for $50 per bale this would mean $25,000,000 of liquid money available to sustain the industries and commerce of that State.

It would also mean that every bale sold for $50 would bring in the money to pick, gin and place on the market at least five bales more of the Georgia crop, which will exceed 2,500,000 bales.
